The Historical Commission seeks to preserve, protect, and develop the historical and archeological assets of Plainfield. The request this year is to provide funds to purchase and install signage at some of Plainfield's historical sites such as the old town pound. In the past, all historical resource monies for Plainfield have come out of the limited Plainfield Historical Society funds. As the Commission is tasked by the town to protect and share the historical assets of the town, it seems appropriate to ask the town to help fund the establishment of trails and signage associated with the newly discovered animal pound and the Streeter Mill complex in order to make Plainfield's cultural assets accessible to all.
